Fine wood is the warm, living material used for the Manzoni model; the solid wood used for the front frame combined with the metal temples set it apart. The ultra-clean lines of this model's design conceal a cutting-edge technical device for the wooden frame: a lens fastener for opening and closing the lenses, making assembly easier.

Last but not least is the Ungaretti model made entirely in metal. It features an oversize slightly butterfly-shape front frame and distinctive leather stitching that runs along the whole length of the temples.
